

Drivers who want to join a road train state their destination and are guided by their on-board navigation system to the nearest road train. The car joins the rear of the queue and the system takes over control of the car.